GENERAL CONDITIONS:

1. The client agrees to abide by the professional hunter's decision to kill any animal wounded or shot at by the client, or if in the professional hunter's opinion it is a threat to human life or is suffering.
2. The decision by the professional hunter with regard to paragraph 1 above, will be final and binding on the client for full payment whether the animal is found and recovered or not.
3. The client's decision to fire upon a trophy animal exonerates the outfitter and professional hunter of any liability relating to the quality or subsequent measurement of such trophy.
4. The client agrees that all photos and videos taken during a safari may be used as promotional material published by Paul Phelan Safaris.
5. All clients should ensure that they are fully acquainted with their weapons before the safari and that correct calibres for the animal to be hunted are carried. Paul Phelan Safaris accepts no responsibility for poor shooting or time required to follow up wounded or missed animals. Clients are advised to contact Paul Phelan Safaris for advice on suitable calibres, bullet weights and legal minimum calibres.
6. The main African hunting season is from March to October. Any client wishing to hunt during the summer season (November – February) must be aware that climatic conditions diminish chances of a high success rate when compared with the main hunting season. High temperatures and difficult trophy recoveries during summer months may also adversely affect trophy quality (e.g. decomposition and/or hair slip)
7. Clients are advised to consult Paul Phelan Safaris on climatic conditions likely to prevail during their safari in order to enable them to equip with adequate clothing.
8. The client's attention is drawn to the fact that there are certain inherent risks involved in participating in the types of safaris or tours offered by Paul Phelan Safaris or its agents and that, by placing a deposit to reserve a safari, the clients accept these risks as their own.
9. By contracting to Paul Phelan Safaris for a safari or tour, the client and all companions who accompany him/her on such as safari or tour accept that they have read and understood the entire contents of this document, and current brochure and price list.
